

Student Evaluation Summary Inventory Sheet

Student Instructional or Assessment Grouping	Purposes			Best Advantage				Planning Decisions
	Diagnostic	Formative	Summative	Systematic	Record	Low-stakes	Post-Test
Number of Grouping
Methods of Organization	These methods of organization are used as structures to conduct assessments and to present evaluation information to students and parents/guardians. They may include one or several data recording methods, ongoing student activities, or quizzes and tests.
Assessment Stations
Individual Assessments
Group Assessments
Contracts
Self- and Peer-Assessments
Portfolios
Methods of Data Recording	These are methods used to collect assessment information by recording data as students participate in ongoing activities or quizzes and tests being used for evaluation purposes.
Anecdotal Records
Observation Checklists
Rating Scales
Ongoing Student Activities	These activities are used for instructional and evaluation purposes. Assessment data are gathered as part of normal classroom instructional activity, using certain organizational and data recording methods.
Written Assignments
Presentations
Performance Assessments
Homework
Quizzes and Tests	Quizzes and tests are designed and used to collect specific assessment information during or at the end of instructional activities. These activities can be used in whole or in part as organizational or data recording methods.
Oral Assessment Items
Performance Test Items
Extended Open-Response Items
Short-Answer Items
Matching Items
Multiple-Choice Items
True/False Items								